

The Black Market opened in the fall of '68,
a year of black student revolt at IU;
it was a space for black community life and culture.
The KKK fire-bombed it on the day after Christmas,
destroying the store beyond repair.
The land it stood on remains a gathering place for Bloomington uncontrollables.

bloomington people's history